Hello,

If you're getting this message, then consider yourself welcomed to COCO 000: ????. I trust you have all read the syllabus and are therefore both prepared for what lies ahead and aware of my strict policy of attendance. I understand that my methods may seem a bit draconian at first, but as you get to know me I'm sure you'll come to appreciate that showing up for class will be the least of your problems.

On a schedule-related note, today's 2 has been fortuitously canceled. Instead class will be held today at 9 a.m. All of you who missed today's lecture have just failed the course.

Good luck on the quiz tomorrow!

Hello concerned students,

I'm sure you are all deeply, deeply concerned about the tragedy in Darfur and wondering what you can do to help. Did you know that for the price of a small cup of coffee, you can give a Darfuri child enough food to last a month? To donate, blitz back to this account, or look for us at the giant table in the lobby of Thayer.

Thanks,
Phillip Anthropy

Hi all,

Just wanted to let you know that we'll be having our first BIG SUMMER BBQ here at the Nava's house, tomorrow (Friday) at 6 pm.

RSVP is not necessary, but it sure would be swell!

Hope everyone can make it!

The Christian Navigators would like to apologize to those students injured in Friday's grill explosion. Seems someone (who shall remain nameless, God forgive him) threw a couple of kosher hot dogs on our new Burning Bush(TM) Propane Grill, in clear violation of the warranty. We will pray for the victims of the resulting detonation during our next meeting. Oh, but the Lord God our Father has a good plan for us all, even if third-degree burns are a significant part of it.

On the upswing, we've booked Christian singing group "Prussian Blue" to play at our next function, which is next week, at the same time (Friday), at the same place (the BBQ pit, if the fires are put out by then)!

RSVP, so we know how many seats to fill!

Hi, Henry! Do you remember me? I was in your Bio 3 class--you lent me your class notes for the day I was gone on a service trip. Thanks so much for that, by the way! You really saved my skin! And your notes made so much more sense to me than Prof. Heffer's lectures. Although I'm sure that was my fault, and not Prof. Heffer's. (He is a professional educator, after all!)

Well, I guess I should get to the point. Would you like to go out to dinner or a matinee movie with me some time? I don't mean to pressure you. You just seem like a great guy, and besides, I ought to be spending more time around people who understand Bio like you do, ha!

Several students have e-mailed me requesting some illumination regarding the contents of my last message. No, by "feel the wrath of my switch" I did not imply I was going to beat tardy disciples of knowledge with a stick. That's absurd. You are all absurd for asking me that, Claud, Duran and Cletis. What I meant was that being late for class, as you all were, would incur the wrath of my switching subjects, which I have done.

All right, people, I'll get straight to the point. The Zimmerman Project is not going well. The stealth paradigm has deteriorated: operatives are getting themselves picked up on bioscans, getting drawn into firefights--in short, committing security breaches. And meanwhile, we're no closer to seizing Berlin's underground antimatter facility and detonating the moon.

There is also the issue of the civilian casualties, which have been considerable. Unfortunately, we are not out of those morally tricky waters yet, because my superiors have just made an unprecedented decision: they are deploying Dark Dawn Squadron to the German countryside.

This is where things get messy. You all know Dark Dawn Squadron's methods. They'd strangle a baby with their bare hands if they thought they could use the corpse for firewood. With midterm elections coming up, we can't have the public finding out that its taxes are financing a fighting force whose protocols go against every known moral code. So I want each and every one of you to understand that, as of now, this Department's number-one priority is to keep the existence of Dark Dawn Squadron under wraps. This comes before any moral, ethical, or legal considerations. We are caught between a rock and a hard place here, people. If we get squeamish about cleaning up witnesses, lucky guessers, or even the mildly inquisitive, it's our ass.

All right, enough bullshit. Do your jobs. And I'm sure I don't have to remind you that everything you have read here is classified to the highest degree.

We're well into an exciting Summer term, and you're still sitting there reading the same old blitzes about how exciting our Summer term is. Get outside, go exploring and have some fun with these fun DOC-sponsored trips. Please remember to RSVP well in advance to guarantee yourself a spot, check the DOC bulletin frequently for updates and new trips and most importantly of all, remember to have FUN!

-The DOC staff

July 14: Hiking, Level: Boring
 Hike up a mountain, just like a real mountain climber. Walk this way and that. Blaze a trail that has been blazed so many times before. Learn to identify telltale signs of moss growth and why nature is so cruel.

July 16-July 22: Going on a Bear Hunt
 "I'm not scared," you say? You will be. You will be.

July 20-24: Destroy Old Sturbridge Village!
 For too long have the Sturbridge people mocked our name and pissed in our river. They are a primitive people and Dartmouth can little abide their continued chidings. Enjoy a fast-paced forced march through the mountains until you reach the town... then sack it! Burn the town, take anything of value, and scatter its people to the winds. Salt the charred, blood-soaked earth to leave nothing left to the Sturbridgites except the memory of their ignominious defeat. The DOC will provide packed meals as well truncheons and hatchets.

July 26-July 28: Claim that Land in the Name of Spain
 It's not hard to do. Natives be damned!

July 30-?: Seek Out the Golden Moose
 Having waited a full year, the DOC has decided to declare the ill-fated O5X expedition lost, but that leaves plenty of room for one of you to claim the sacred golden moose of ancient lore. Ignore those silly old wives' tales about an "ancient curse" or "mythical flesh-hawks that live only to pluck human eyeballs from their sockets." Instead, believe us when we tell you it's a straight path to the fabled moose's resting place in the Valley of Mt. Killgloom, where taffy hangs from the trees and the springs are made of bubblegum! Someone has to get the moose eventually, and he or she will be crowned Lord High Protector of first floor Robo. Become part of a popular Dartmouth tradition and maybe even history!

August 8-August 20: Work Camping: an Adventure in Black Lung!
 Get in shape and learn about local geology with a stint at the DOC's local coal mine. If you've been having trouble getting that fat ass off the couch, nothing supplies motivation better than a flesh-rending blow from the whips of a sadomasochistic overseer! If you'd like to volunteer your service as an overseer blitz "Chris Chin."

I know what you're thinking, but thought I'd mention that Malaysia had its first annual democracy parade on this day in 1963! Sure, July 4th is usually the bigger holiday, but it's nice to remember other groups. (It's Malaysian Heritage Month, if you must know--I checked online!)

Um, I guess I'll get to the point... I just wanted to say that there was no need for you to apologize for missing dinner the other day. It was nice to get out of Amarna for a change, even if it was only by myself. Besides, there was no way you could predict that the Vermont Harvest Fair would need an emergency replacement fiddle player, especially since I think harvest fairs are usually held in the fall. (But what do I know about farming... I couldn't grow mold on a piece of bread, ha!) Anyway, you should play for me sometime--I'm a bit of an amateur fiddler myself, and I'd love to hear what a real expert could do!

So, please don't feel sorry about anything. Maybe we can call that night a "raincheck" and get dinner together some other night! But only if you want to. (Gosh, I'm forward... if Sister Ruth could see me now!)

Have a nice Malay!

The request to drop COCO 000 as part of your 06X course curriculum has been: DENIED.

Unfortunately, the Office of the Registrar is unable to drop you from classes that do not exist, and finds your excuse that the course description has "mysteriously disappeared" from the ORC and our website pitifully amusing. All of us here at the office had a good laugh about it. Please address all future messages on this subject to the Office of Career Services, which offers any number of internship opportunities for aspiring comedians.

We remind you that it's still not too late to take the class as an NRO.

Someone stole the mechanical bull we rented for our Ruralsplosion(TM) dance party! Some girl said she saw a kid dragging it out of the backyard while we were all distracted by the musical stylings of Krystal Méth. Goddamnit, we paid so much for that band and they were just used as a diversion from the mechanical bull that we also paid a shit-ton for. I am so pissed, I punched a hole through my ten-gallon hat and I don't even care.

But no student is to visit the Lone Pine dining facility until we can clear up certain issues with the staffers there. The College only supplies the payroll for a maximum of ten Lone Pine Employees, far short of the hundred or so seen milling about the Collis Center this afternoon.

It doesn't seem like the work of pranksters, but just to be safe, all students with a known sense of humor have been imprisoned until the matter can be cleared up.

We thank you for your cooperation.

Henry-

I got back in last night, it was nice to see that we had a message on our phone from you! Thanks for caring, but don't worry, everything should be fine.

Yes, your father is still in Africa somewhere, but just as I was getting on the plane I met some very nice game hunters who were just arriving. They promised to keep an eye out for him on their big hunting trip. Not much else to talk about, things are boring around here.

How are classes? I know you were having trouble with that one class, how is that going? Hate to bug you about plane tickets again, but you know, I care too much.

All right, drop what you're doing and listen up. We have a Code Omicron Security Breach on our hands.

At 0651 hours this morning, a routine automated scan turned up a civilian signal in the Department communications server. The signal was traced back to a dormitory room in rural New Hampshire. Somehow, a college kid--tagged by ident-bots as <Henry.A.Ledbetter.Male.Nancyborg>--is receiving selected Department e-mails. For all we know, he might be reading this.

As you know, Black Ops Department digital security protocols are the most stringent in the world; Ledbetter's keyboard should have converted itself into nano-disassemblers and reduced him to his constituent carbon chains the moment he tried to access our mainframe. If Ledbetter did this himself, there's no telling what else he's capable of. However, Ledbetter's genetic code doesn't show a predisposition for genius-level digital terrorism, so there is also the possibility that he's being used as a shield for a more powerful individual or organization. Either way, we're dealing with something very, very dangerous here. A simple disappear-and-deny is not going to work this time.

Goddamn it, this department can't afford a security breakdown right now. Not with Black Dawn in the field. I want a report on my desk by 1600 hours sharp. I want to know how the kid did this, who's responsible, and what we can do to repair our security envelope.

Hi Henry! How are you? Look, I'm so sorry to burden you with a "bummer" blitz... But here goes.

I just got back from seeing Dr. Leonards, our family physician. I'd been having stomach pain for a few weeks. I thought it was just indigestion, which I get sometimes, but it didn't go away. Dr. Leonards did a lot of tests and x-rays and sent me away to a specialist. Today, he called me in and told me I have a tumor on my pancreas. He says it's a big one and it's started to spread. He says I probably only have a few weeks to live.

I'm so sorry I didn't tell you sooner--I didn't want to bother you about nothing, especially since we haven't even known each other for that long. I mean, we have, but I just didn't want to burden you in case... Well, I don't have to explain myself. I'm sure you understand.

I'm crying as I'm writing this... I'm going to short-circuit my keyboard, ha! But Henry, please know that I'll always, always love you. I think you are so special, and I only wish we could have had a lifetime to get to know each other, and not just one short summer.

I've decided not to go to the hospital, as I don't want to burden my parents with medical bills. But please don't visit me in my room--I don't think I could take that.

With all my love,
Rebecca

Could you send me the notes from psych today. The D&D tournament got a little nuts yesterday when Zack, the DM, tried to tell me that magic missiles don't work on a Gelatinous Cube because "gelatin is a poor conductor." What the fuck is that shit?! We finally settled the argument when I chugged an entire gallon of mango juice and then smashed the table that we were playing the game on. It was fucking nuts. They were all cheering for me, yelling shit like "please stop," "go away," and "you don't belong here." Ha, are those guys fucking kidders or what? Anyway, I passed out in the living room--I'd found a bunch of wine coolers in the fridge before all this--and didn't wake up for a while, so I could use the notes from psych. Thanks bro.

To the members of the class of 2008,

It's already shaped up to be a big summer at Dartmouth, with numerous innovations and new programs accompanying the return of age-old traditions and warm weather. I would like to take this moment to extend my personal gratitude for your contribution to what has turned out to be a safe and prosperous summer term while reminding you that, as rising juniors, this is a time in which you are given your first opportunities to experience true leadership on tomorrow's world stage. What--

We interrupt your regularly scheduled blitz from the president to bring you this late-breaking information. A giant dirigible has appeared over the skyline in Norwich, Vt. No clue who is inside yet, but it seems to be attempting to dock at Norwich's Olde Inne. We still don't have much to go on, but trust to the Office of the President to give you the latest informa--wait, it seems to be flying a little erratically. Was that a flash? Was that smoke? I thought I--good God, it's burning! The flying object is on fire, there are flames and smoke everywhere and--oh, Lord, it's plummeting into Norwich! Norwich is in ruins! Ladies and gentleman, the entire town is in chaos! All 72 residents are running for their lives! Where is S&S? Oh, no, they don't have jurisdiction here! Somebody help that woman, she's--no, no, I can't look! The Bakery is on fire, all the bread is baked! Where is the fire department? Good God, the fire department is destroyed! The Dalmatians have nowhere to run, they're just chasing their burning tails around and around and--Oh, the humanity! I can't say any more. I can't say any more, ladies and gentlemen.

Sincerely,
 James Wright
 President, Dartmouth College

Guess who doesn't have their copy of Stratego anymore? I broke into Alpha Theta last night and decided to try and pimp something. I snuck in through the front door and into their living room where I totally just pimped their Commemorative Anniversary Edition of Stratego. The guys who were playing it at the time were pretty angry and soon they had brought like half the house down to try and stop me. I attached a picture that one of the guys at my house took for "evidence purposes" when I was walking back.

My housemates later made me return it and apologize to the people I hurt, but the joke it still on them because next time they try to play I think they will discover their game oddly absent of bombs AND spies. That'll teach them to mess with the Tau. Booyah!!!

Agent McCormick has just been in my office, articulating a viewpoint that I know many of you share. McCormick's opinion is that, since it appears that Ledbetter is an innocent, nonpolarized and disinterested civilian, we need not fear reprisal should we move against him. Therefore, says McCormick, a standard d&d and retroactive identity wipe would be a risk-free solution to our problem.

I only mention McCormick's pleasant little theory so that like-minded operatives know not to bother me with it. Folks, we've put our own nuts in a vise, but that doesn't mean Ledbetter won't turn the crank if we give him reason to do so. The best policy now is temporary appeasement--we can't give Ledbetter any reason to move against us, at least until we can come up with a way to take him out that precludes the possibility of retaliatory disclosure. For all we know, he has backup copies of everything and instructions to mail them to CNN if anything should happen to him.

And will somebody please write some code that will let us REMOVE people from the mailing list? I can't believe the idiots in Digital overlooked that. Sometimes I wonder if I'm playing for the right team.

My most dear hearth friends and fellows,

The week has been a most strenuous one in my esteem, full of personal quarrels and vexations. I have delved deep into a craggy pit of horrors: a thrice-damned essay, and meant to be filled out in the meager span of one class period, no less! Oh, despair! Would that such an open-ended question on carbon-smelting had never graced my presence! Fool that I was, I was too proud to put forth the base, common answer, even yet knowing it to be that which Herr Professor might erroneously accept as "correct"--and too vexed by that scallawag Time to try and elaborate the entirety of my true feelings on the matter. How can one truly describe the intensity of his feelings, the worldly implications of carbon-smelting, in a mere two hours?

But, ah! away, Melancholy, for tonight my mind turns to frolic. Truly, friends, for friends I think you be, we must needs revel as no man or beast has dared revel before. On that note, I dare propose we sally forth even unto the Chi Gamma Epsilon estate, and seize the golden chalice of Paddle-Pong victory from the cold, lifeless gauntlets of our vanquished foes! I shall be in attendance with the fair and noble Carmen, who shall be much obliged to observe as I single-handedly test our mettle in this most gentlemanly of alcohol-imbric sports.

Eat, drink and be merry, for Monday we have mid-terms.

If I could yet still count, I should berate you for the sheer number of low strikes you dared press against me. I say, Sir, are you interested in pursuing Pong as it is classically played, or playing a game of Whack-the-Mole with your paddle? Forgive my liberality, but these spirits make me weak. But truly, Sir, bad form. Bad form!

But enough of this foolish war-making! We must unite as conspirators to snatch fair Honor from the Tri-Kappites in the form of whatever their guardians have not seen fit to bolt down. Might I suggest one of the composites, the one from '92? A very good year.

Ah, companions to the last,

What a night of mischief we must have had. Alas, I myself remember naught, but I awoke me in the bed of a maiden most strange to mine eye. With all the bawdry and loose speech of a woman o'th' night, she painted me as being a most affectionate--ah, but that tale is for a table. And so, I propose an expedition to the Court, where we shall feast on all that the Fates--those thrice-mysterious spinstresses--have seen fit to provide. The caravan shall depart directly the bell tolls. Come, let us gull the gullets i' provender, the more withal to play swapping-places with that we lost nighttimes, whilst we regale each other with twice-told tales of no relevance whatsoever.

Your gracious servant,

P.S.
 Carmen, that damnable vixen, has early last eve proven the true hue of her character. She is henceforth to be banished from mine presence. What was, and alabaster-pure, is gone. And gone that name, for ever and anon.

It would appear that last night the entire Collis Center was converted into a massive Lone Pine eatery. When sent to investigate, Officer Leamins encountered what appeared to be Officers McAnthony and Wallace, dressed in full Lone Pine regalia, waiting to take his order. Officer Leamins followed the two in, against warnings from headquarters, and has not reemerged.

Collis Center is now off-limits to all students and faculty. We will attempt to recover the building if possible, but until then please do not attempt to redeem any of the Lone Pine coupons that were inserted under students' doors last night. Also please ignore the aroma of hot cheese fries and buttery fried chicken tenders now being pumped across the Green.

Once there is doctor, and another false doctor fills him with so much rage. He is getting so mad that he may die. So he spends his time building project to impress and then destroy false doctor. But he gets half done and then he is realizing, that there is nowhere in pathetic podunk town that he can find a decent organ salesman. The mad doctor, he is heartbroken.

It is sad story, Henry. Which brings me to my point: Kidneys. You tire of them, yes?

Last night I got wasted challenging the entire house to a thunderdome. Unfortunately it was Friday night so everyone was doing their homework for their classes on Monday and no one wanted to take me on. I was almost gonna quit when some guy muttered "Why don't you go challenge the kitchen sink, dumbass." Well, no kitchen sink calls me a dumbass and gets away with it. I think I almost had it at the end but I lost after 34 beers. I don't remember what happened next, but I somehow woke up at the bottom of the river with a couch tied to my feet that said "property of Phi Tau". It's a good thing the rope wasn't too thick to break. Man, I must do some crazy shit when I'm drunk, too bad I don't remember it.

It seems that some pranksters replaced Jones Media Center with a new Lone Pine restaurant last night between the hours of 12 and 4 AM. Students with media projects will refrain from using the Center until we can apprehend those responsible.

We will begin the abduction and interrogation of random students this afternoon. Do not be alarmed if you find yourself thrown into the back of a van today, it is all for a good cause. Simply relax and answer the officer's questions in a calm manner.

All students seen wearing Lone Pine uniforms will be subject to the most severe punishment. I don't know where this trend started, but by god I know where it will stop.

Right here, that's where.

Hi,

Sorry to clutter in-boxes but I figured people don't respond to the lost blitzes much. Has anybody seen like a brain or something lying around? It would be pretty small. My hamster is missing his. Please, I don't know who took it and I don't care, but if you could please leave it in my room, second floor Midmass, I'd really, really appreciate it.

Thanks,
 Trish

I'm so sorry to have deceived you with the subject line. I know how much you all like fun, but if you could please answer these short questions for my stats project I would forever appreciate it. No need for names. I know who you all are.

- Are you a male or female?
- Do you smoke regularly?
- Do you have a 9A?
- How many times in the last week have you sucked cock?
- If you answered never: why? How do you know it's bad if you've never tried it?

Thanks again. I hope you guys like prizes as I will be entering you all in a drawing for something special.

 Hello prof. Erebos,

Sorry to bother you but I had some questions after yesterday's exam and the TA wasn't much help at all. First of all, was the exam just the Lone Pine employee application? Second, was the TA just an Etch-a-Sketch with a crude smiley face painted on? Also, if it was an Etch-a-Sketch, why was the face painted on front using oil-based paint, ruining it for everyone else forever?

I know you sent out a dire warning not to send you any questions about the exam if we fear for our sanity, but I'd really appreciate it if you could get back to me on this.

Thanks,

Officers on patrol this morning discovered two tables, a dozen chairs, and a wet bar in the Hopkins Center art gallery. The officers were puzzled by the unannounced addition, until they noticed that the wet bar was actually growing out of the wall. Additional reports note that the sculpture garden has begun to sprout board games and a popcorn maker.

We are now considering the Hopkins Center compromised. There will be no more artistic events for the rest of the term. Any student found tearing out the page-sized coupon for a free Lone Pine dinner out of today's D will be shot, and posthumously expelled. I will not tolerate this menace any longer.

By God, I've lost three men to this thing. I won't let this go on any more.

You have complaints about new roommate, yes? Sylvester is a friend from old country, visiting to taste one of your Ballpark™ American frankfurters advertised on our TV. He has traveled long and far to taste this little bit of American dream. Is touching, I know. Also, please do not be mocking him for his body-concealing shroud or eight-foot frame. He is sensitive soul, specifically sensitive to open flame, so please keep him away from such things.

If he whines, it is a pellet he is wanting. I buy from pet store, bag is under bed.

Be careful if you are going to walk near the Tau because some guys on the second floor must be doing some moving. I was walking past the edge of the house coming home from drill like I do every morning when the piano that is on our second floor fell from one of the windows and landed on me. I caught it with my head so I am alright, but you should watch out.

Hi Henry! It's really nice to hear from you--I was beginning to worry you'd dropped off the face of the earth! (Not literally, of course!) But I must say, I'm worried by the tone of your last blitz--are you OK? In response to your question, no, I don't think I would never "use you for money and manual labor." Why do you ask? You seem to have something specific in mind...

Well, if you want to talk, I'm here. I do hope you cheer up soon, and remember that "time heals all wounds." (Don't tell Band-Aid, Inc., ha!)

It's Finals time, children, and you know what that means: one first-born child. I demand a young apprentice whom I can train in the many ways of COCO 000 to replace me when my time on this plane is done. Whose child it is will be irrelevant as long as it is made mine. You must choose: one child or a median grade of a C for the class.

Who said the folks in my house weren't awesome? This afternoon they threw me a CRAZY surprise birthday party. I had found out earlier what they were up to so I wanted to surprise THEM by having pizza delivered for the whole house. I was lying on the front lawn drinking when they called me into the house. I was walking toward the front door when BOOM!!!! It turns out someone had attached a shotgun welcome mat to the door. That EBA's guy didn't know what hit him! Some people were freakin' out pretty hardcore but at least the pizza was FREE!

By God, I've seen it! I ventured into the bowels of the Hopkins Center, and there it stands, radiating the heat of a dozen suns, casting its blood-red glow up the walls, piercing my mortal eyes and spreading despair into the darkest corners of my brain! Oh, the malice I felt! Oh, the hate, deep and furious as an ocean! Oh woeful Lord, I've witnessed the monstrous heart of Lone Pine, and I know it means to end us all!

The green-shirts blocked the door, but I made it here to this blitz terminal. I hesitate to make use of it lest the dreadnaught discover the technology and add it to its own perverse arsenal, but I must take that chance! This story must be told!

Oh god, the green-shirts are here! I'll see you in hell, you bastards! I'll tear your heads off and send you bleeding back to your black maker, and you can tell him Sark sent you! I die fighting! Beware, students! Beware the Pine that Stands Alone!

Ever since the investigation of AD failed, they've been looking for a house to take down. Well, it looks like those fuckers chose us. They've arrested half of the Tau and are charging them with 2nd degree murder for that EBA's guy. I mean, is that bullshit or what? I guess the po-pos forgot what college is all about. Worst of all, they say they're shutting down the Tau until the investigation is over. But I've locked myself in the basement in protest. I will not let the spirit of Phi Tau die!

Well hello there, students! Due to popular demand, the separate branches of Lone Pine across campus have uprooted, and coalesced into a throbbing omniscient hive mind hovering forty feet above the Green! Don't worry about access problems: if you want good times and great eats, our savage popcorn tendrils will transport you into the center of the flavor mass without delay! (Note: venturing outside is considered a binding agreement for good times and great eats.)

Also, if any green-shirted shock troops ask you for your order today, yield without hesitation! Rejoice and be absorbed into the fold!
